Totality in Brazil—Will Not Be Visible Here

An eclipse, be it of the candidate for poundmaster or the center of the solar system, is always an interesting event. There will be an eclipse of the sun on October 10, but, unfortunately, it will not be observed from any part of Hawaii. The point of totality will be in the vicinity of the city of Rio de Janeiro, in Brazil. At the present time there are a large number of astronomers and observers on their way to that city for the express purpose of making notes and getting views of the phenomenon. On application to Professor Donaghho of the College of Hawaii, he furnished the Star-Bulletin with the fellowing facts regarding the eclipse: Total eclipse of the sun October 10, 1912. Total phase begins in the Paeific Ocean north of the Galapagos Islands, and sweeps in a southeasterly frection across South America, passng near Quito and Rio de Janeiro, and ending about midway between Madagascar and the south pole. Entirely invisible at Honolulu, as the shadow will meet the earth about thirty minutes after midnight and leave it at about 6:30 a. m., Honolulu time. The maximum length of the totality, near Rio de Janeiro, will be about one minute and fifty-five seconds.
